As portrayed in the charts, the students have positive response on internal assessments (see chart-9). More emphasis is required in providing adequate books in the college library (see chart-7); further appraise that students are not loaded with too much curricular or co-curricular activities (see chart-4 & 5). The college can introduce add-on courses or short term courses that would boost employability (Chart-10). Other concerns – depth of curriculum content, sequence of the course, clarity of course objectives and structure of syllabi cannot be calculated much since the college follows fixed curriculum prescribed by the University.

As indicated in the above charts, it can be concluded that the curriculum for 2nd Semester B. A. Political Science (Honours) students has been satisfactory with majority of the grading ranging from "Excellent" to "Good" across all the ten (10) parameters.

Also, it can be noted that there are certain areas of concern that needs care and improvement. There is a need for improvement attention to the syllabus load over the students which could hamper the effective learning and interest of the students (Chart No. 4). Likewise, there is also a need to enhance the library material/books over the existing ones to cater the requirement of the students for their different papers (Chart No. 7). The coverage of the syllabus can also be improved by allocating more classes to the concerned papers (Chart No. 5). And lastly, the effectiveness of the internal assessment and learning needs of the students can be further improved by incorporating new and innovative methods (Chart No. 8 and 9).

As projected in the charts, it can be generally concluded that more emphasis need to be given in providing adequate books in the college library (chart No.7). For relevancy of the course for providing employability (Chart No.10), although most students have indicated optimism, the college can further work in integrating add-on courses or short term courses/trainings that would boost the prescribed curriculum. Other concerns on curriculum content, course objectives, sequencing and size of syllabus cannot be worked on much since the college follows fixed curriculum prescribed by the University; however, teachers and college as a whole can also work in presenting the curriculum in a justifiable and interesting way. No further prominent additional comments were received from the students on the curriculum feedback.
